

Story idea

There was an actor who could act so well that he forgot how to experience real emotion and instead had to act like he felt it

Every time he was alone the only thing you could see behind his eyes is emptiness as if he's dead unaware of his surroundings if he didn't act even when he was going to die he wouldn't even flinch

He needs to learn how to experience emotion once more